Leaving Home

I am not an old and experienced farmer, but I am one of the hard handed sons of toil. I imagine, however, that I know something about cultivating the soil, as well as practicing medicine, and getting happiness out of each. I know enough to know that agriculture is the basis of wealth, prosperity and luxury. I know that in the country where the tillers of the fields are free, everybody is free and ought to be prosperous.

Why should the Negro leave home and go to parts of the country unknown to him? The South has proven to be the best home for the Negro in all America. It is the best section for the masses of our people to live, and the best for the classes, for the masses support the classes.

I say home because the Negro has for more than half a century prospered and thrived in the South. He has bought home and thousands of acres of land. He has bought and paid for creditable schools, churches and lodge halls. It is a common thing to find him in business in the cities and towns throughout the South.

I must admit the European war has caused a scarcity of labor in the North, and the agents are presenting alluring stories to the Negroes about the conditions of affairs up there, but has never told the Negro about the climate which he is to be subjected to. As soon as the war is over his place will be supplied by that foreign element which he can not compete with a laborer.

Does it stand to reason that you should give up your home and go elsewhere? Can you say a farm up North? Will the abolitionists work with you? Will a northern white man give you a house to build or make you for man of a job? These are some of the questions I am asking you to consider before leaving hastily.

It seems that every farm boy has taken an oath that he will never cultivate the soil. At the age of from 10 to 21 he leaves the farm and rushes to the towns and cities. The want to be bookkeepers, doctors, merchants, lawyers, waiters in hotels or preachers. Nearly every boy acquainted with the three R's imagines that he is too much educated to be wasted in the farm. They want to engage in something that promises quick returns. That boy finds things in the cities quite alluring which keeps him on the go all the time. That boy spends his days in idleness and his nights in debauchery. I said he wants an investment with quick returns. He here returns home with consumption, in other words a wreck. I venture to say that 50 per cent of those who are leaving now will return in less than one year with the following diseases: 1st, Consumption; 2nd, Syphilis; 3rd, Rheumatism; 4th, Bronchitis; and others.

Can we keep them on the farm? Yes. Farming must be made more attractive. The comforts of the town must be added to the beauty of the field; the sociability of the city must be rendered possible in the country. The farmers must be more sociable in their homes and proud of their business. We must have better churches, better preachers, better school houses, and better teachers.

I learn from our Mayor and Marshal that the white people of this section have pledged themselves to support the Negroes, that is to induce them to stay here and not leave. What more could we expect?
